VOL. III. NO. 194.} OAKLAND, CALIFORNIA, THURSDAY EVENING, OCTOBER 8, 1874. {Per Week, 10 cts. Per Year, $4 00.

An English Dinner.

We decide upon a dinner and then invite the most eligible noodle of a nobleman we can find to occupy the chair, endeavoring to fix upon one whose political opinions are not so strong as to make him obnoxious to either party. Flattered by the invitation, the noble noodle consents. Then we go to moneyed men, saying, "Lord Tom Noody or Prince Good-for-Nothing is to preside at our dinner. Will you be steward?" Glad to keep fine company, though only for a few hours, these gentlemen consent, knowing, as does the chairman, that a subscription is the penalty paid for the notoriety or honor thus conferred. Chairman and steward secured, smaller lights are only too glad to buy tickets. The dinner is given; we coach the chairman about the charity in which he is supposed to be profoundly interested, about which he speaks in a singularly parrot-like manner, heads the subscription with £25 or £50, the stewards follow with less or greater sums, more private individuals swell the amount, the list of subscribers is read at dinner, published in the next day's newspapers, and out of the vanity of humanity our noble charity is set upon its legs.

Desirous of testing these dinners, I assisted at several, humiliated as I felt at the first by being allowed tea and sandwiches in one room, while the tyrant man sat down to joints and removes in another. I went on this occasion to hear royalty in the shape of the Duke of Edinburg speak. If royalty had anything to teach I wished to learn it in one easy lesson. After the feeding came the national anthem, of course. For the I-don't-know-how-manyeth time God was commanded to save the Queen, and right or wrong, confound her enemies. Then His Royal Highness rose amid a tremendous clatter of knives, forks, glasses and plates that did duty as claque. Everybody listened as though pearls were about to drop from his lips. In a voice hesitating and with an absence of command of language that would have astounded an American baby, His Royal Highness contrived to propose His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, the Princess of Wales, and the rest of the Royal family, adding, "I presume I need not say anything to recommend this toast to you." "More sensible words were never spoken," exclaimed a next day's leader. "We are not surprised that loud cheering greeted the announcement." There was no doubt about the cheering. His Royal Highness attempted to say a good word for the theatrical profession, and grievously murdered the Queen's English. His inane tautology was received as we would receive the utterances of a Webster or a Phillips, while the humor of the comedian, Buckstone, and the graceful speech of the elegant Alfred Wigan, an actor of whom England has a right to be proud—both of whom spoke after all the noblemen present had aired their stupidity—were accepted as clever, but were not allowed to produce such demonstration as only belongs to the purple. I was disgusted, not with the Duke of Edinburg (who blames the sacred cat once worshipped by the Egyptians?), but with his flunkies.—Kate Field.

Reasons Why.

There are a few simple facts which easily explain the comparative indifference of the people to the "Third Term Question."

First—There is no hurry about settling this matter. When it becomes evident the people want General Grant for another term, and that he will accept, the question will become a living one.

Second—The people are not afraid that they will wake up some fine morning, and find themselves obliged to vote for Grant for a third term. They feel a serene confidence in their ability to regulate their own conduct, when the time for nomination arrives.

Third—The people are not afraid of being led captive by the office holders, who have only influence in proportion to their ability, character and accordance with the popular sentiments. The absolute and ridiculous failure of the late Andrew Johnson to control voters through his office-holders is not forgotten.

—A Brussels correspondent writes: The manager of the Theatre de la Monnaie (the great opera) here is trying a new means to prevent the disturbances occasioned by frequent entries into the house during the performance, which are caused here chiefly by visits of the spectators during the entr'actes to the numerous cafes and taverns in the neighborhood. The outside of the theater has now been provided with electric bells all round, by which the absentees will always be informed in future three minutes before the rising of the curtain that the time has arrived to return.

—The Peoria Transcript thus notices a discrepancy: "Some weeks ago 'Gath' in one of his rambling letters, stated that the Chicago Tribune's stock was $1,200,000. Now comes Alfred Cowles, Treasurer of the Tribune Company, and files with the State Board of Equalization a statement that the entire capital is worth only $80,000. Here is evidently an opportunity for the State Board of Equalization to institute a little investigation." There is no doubt that "Gath" is nearer correct than Cowles in his estimate.

—A young lady undertook to chase the flies out of her room the other day with a towel-pin, when her husband, darting carelessly in, received a whack on the head which could be heard all over the house. Upon recovering his senses he gazed on her with a look of mingled pain and melancholy, only to remark: "I wish even that you were dead."

—The Philadelphia Bulletin thinks that it is impossible to make the modern hired girl funny on the stage. The subject is too solemn to be trifled with.

ABOUT SUICIDE

The number of suicides is, if anything, on the increase Oakland is getting a reputation for this sort of thing Vogelsdorff, VanSyckles, and Eckfeldt in panoramic succession is sufficient cause for special remark

There is no use in discussing the effects particularly—the parties are past recovery—unless it is in place to consider the sorrows of surviving friends If persons of suicidal intentions would only stop to consider the distressing pain the act itself leaves behind they might perhaps let nature take her course If they must go and do it, there is nothing like throwing as much mystery around it as possible To deliberately with malice aforethought, as it were, kill oneself right before folks so to speak, is shocking to the last degree Drowning, poison, and even the pistol can be employed in a mysterious way to effect the ends of the would be suicide, and leave the case in better shape for surviving friends Of course, the world at large has no feelings to consult

But of the causes of suicide these Oakland instances are worthy of consideration, so far as the facts are reported. There seemed to be no bodily excuse for Vogelsdorff's self-destruction Loss of money to a stout man in good health, should be the last cause in the world The chances for recovering a fortune in Oakland, with a man in good health without a family, are too well known to need exemplification The vast field for speculation—in thought and other things—is most reassuring But for a man out of health as well as up a tree, there is not that encouragement for continuing an existence here which the strongest advocates of life might desire Although the Board of Health—one of the most important adjuncts of this great corporation—pronounced it is second to no city on the score of salubriousness, there is still no overruling argument in favor of a man suffering all the bodily pains in the catalogue, when there is so short way out of them as suicide

We always objected to the extreme solemnity that attaches to death as a rule no matter how it may be brought about The most serious thing about life, is in being born There is where all the trouble begins Although, as the rules of good society may require it is in order to sympathize with surviving friends of the deceased and regret the taking off of a good and useful citizen, so far as health permitted him to be so, yet we must not forget that the great work of science and philosophy must go on, it is only a question whether mourning, &c, should take place to day or next week

THE chief duties of the Oakland Board of Health consists of counting the number of babies born, and the number of deaths of all kinds among the human family During September there were 41 births—17 males and 24 of the opposite sex and deaths eight natives of Oakland The Board has been talking about sewer and privy vault nuisances for a month or two, but whoever may be to blame the remedy is not forthcoming in all cases The mighty question of whether the fire department should extinguish the smoking remains of a bale of hay or whether the owner thereof or the city in general should do it—has been worrying the Board How the Board could expect—but we leave the knotty problem to the News You can't get us to put our foot in it when such talent is lying round loose

THE decision of the Supreme Court on the Local Option law is not in accordance with the views of the San Francisco Post and the editor of that paper proceeds to show the Supreme Court Justices that they know next to nothing about constitutional law The comments of the Post cannot but strike the general average with great force and we have no doubt the Judges are sorry they ever said anything on the subject We had no idea the Judges knew so little and one little editor so much until we read that editorial decision It's wonderful what a great ways a small amount of knowledge is made to go—Los Angeles Herald

The author of the above has probably never seen an 'opinion' by the editor of the Oakland News A pure case of where ignorance is bliss

THE examination of the Rev Mr Thurston of Haywood has resulted in his acquittal of the charge of burglary The curious feature of the case is, that the crime of robbing the Odd-Fellows' safe was committed last March, and it has taken all this time to work it up so far as to make it public or cause the arrest of any one It looks as though the society had been endeavoring to try the case outside the courts, after the manner of the churches. These societies are all given to screening their members on a sort of higher law principle

RAILROADING bids fair to accomplish what both the Koran and the Bible have failed to do—teach the proudest Hindoo the great democratic doctrine that all men are born equal, and that none of the works of our Creator are unclean—S F Post

We have labored in vain to get a building inserted into the Post A paper that will perpetrate such a paragraph as the above known, at the same time that Sam Scough of the Examiner gets regularly down in the gutter is past recovery So far as the Post is concerned we will step down and out

One Jim drunk was disposed of and Charles Dwyer drunk and disorderly was a feature of the proceeding James Ast got out of prison yesterday morning where he had served out a thirty days sentence About 8 o clock last evening Officers Blake and Taylor were seen to conduct him up Broadway again he in the meantime making noise enough for a whole family The foolish crowd seemed to relish it and follow Mr Ast never appeared this morning in a highly bruised condition had evidently been making the most of his short time out of prison The Court asked him to deposit $50 and leave, or stay thirty days for rest and refreshment

Two cases—one of assault and one of battery—heretofore mentioned — were continued till to morrow on account of witnesses

Capt Rand arrested a couple of parties on suspicion this morning

Curiosities of Memory.

Mr Miller, who does the architect work at Burnham Standford & Co s mill, gives a few facts of interest about Mr Burnham s case Our readers are probably aware that he is under fair way of recovery, though he is not out and about by any means He has had the most restless nights, and the shock to his nervous system, coupled with the use of opiates, will likely keep him in bed some time But what we wish to call attention to is the strange action of his mind He has recovered consciousness so far as to remember his movements the day of the accident, up till within a couple of hours before it occurred Miller rode up home with Burnham an hour or so before the accident yet the latter does not remember the fact He cannot recall a single thing pertaining to the accident has not the slightest recollection of starting to the railroad station—it is all as yet a blank Whether this condition of mind will remain so with that respect is the curious part of it It seems as though there was a little question here for the scientists, as to what constitutes memory anyhow, whether a section of it can be completely knocked out of time this way or not That Mr B was so disposed of generally, there is not the slightest doubt, and his complete recovery is still a matter of anxiety with his friends

STARTLING SUICIDE !

John M. Eckfeldt Shoots Himself.

Scene of the Occurrence at His Residence, Corner Grove and Tenth Streets

Coroner s Inquest To-Morrow at 11 O Clock.

Another of those events so fearfully destruction—for which Oakland is acquiring notoriety of late occurred this morning between nine and ten o clock this time no less a person than John M Eckfeldt coiner and refiner in the U S Mint, of San Francisco who shot himself at his residence on the southeast corner of Tenth and Grove streets The history and

CIRCUMSTANCES OF DEATH

Of this man constitute a subject for which we have not the time or space today to do justice to A representative of the TRIBUNE went to the scene of the sad occurrence soon after the first news of it reached up-town, and found the family and friends in a great state of distress and excitement but was enabled nevertheless to get sufficient particulars from the wife and sister of the deceased gentleman to furnish our readers with a pretty full account of the dreadful deed Mr Eckfeldt has not been in good spirits or health for some time past, and for a week previous to his death had not slept any worth mentioning and the consequence was his nervous system was in a sadly demoralized condition Yesterday especially he complained of his physical wretchedness, stating that he had no ambition for anything and when he came home from the city in the evening (about seven o clock) he went immediately to bed He did not sleep again last night and this morning did not leave his bed at all, instructing his wife however to get breakfast as usual and he would come down—this after asking him whether she should bring his breakfast up to his room, which was on the second floor to the rear and western side of the house Mr Eckfeldt failing to put in an appearance at breakfast as expected his wife returned to him, but before reaching his room at the end of the hall the smell of powder smoke attracted her serious attention No report of a weapon had been heard On entering the room she found her husband dead from the effects of a pistol shot The weapon was a breech loading derringer, the ball from which entered the left side of the head, about an inch above the ear striking the base of the brain The pillow contained a pool of blood and brains some of the blood reaching and splashing over a space on the floor The bed clothes had been folded down somewhat and the body seemed stretched to its utmost in death — the effect of the shot perhaps naturally causing some sudden peculiar action of the same

Not a strict listing has yet been kept of the parties that had not been heard the previous of the sad and horrible condition of the body were conclusive evidence that the deed had only been committed a very few minutes previous to Mrs Eckfeldt s discovery and her first act was to call to the door—Mrs Whalley—to go or send for a physician Word was immediately conveyed to the medical firm of Drs Baldwin Ridway & Reilay to Coroner Mather and the Western Union telegraph office Of course all medical relief was too late although Dr Reilay repaired at once to the scene Coroner Mather decided to leave the body at the residence of deceased and hold an inquest there to morrow at 11 o clock

THE HISTORY

Of John M Eckfeldt is hereditary, as it were in connection with service of one kind or another pertaining to the Philadelphia and San Francisco U S Mints His father had been coiner and refiner in the Philadelphia institution for the remarkable period of fifty years The deceased came to California over twenty years ago accompanying the machinery employed in establishing the present U S Mint wherein he has played a leading part most of the time during the history of that institution The firm of J M Eckfeldt, & Co which includes the name of Mr Graves, have been in the wire screen business at 112 Clay street, San Francisco There were no evidences of financial embarrassment incident to this case of self-destruction, and it is some satisfaction to know that his family will not be left in distressed circumstances Perhaps some more serious and permanent complaint led to the irritation of mind and distress of body which was the immediate cause of his taking his life Ordinarily, he was one of the stoutest, finest looking of men and that makes the affair more startling to all who knew him His family consisted of wife and five children—four daughters and a son the latter the youngest of the family The sister we speak of is Mrs Bennett, a near neighbor He was over forty years of age

THE FUN OF ITEM-HUNTING.

How a Man Fell Off a House and Didn t Send for a Doctor

In this extensive city of Oakland there is no end of trouble some times in getting the facts of contiguous incidents immediately and other items that are the delight of the reporter Smollett s History of an Atom was intended for the history of an item but the printer set it up wrong. Items in Oakland are not so numerous at best that we can afford to let many escape but the way they will tangle up in the brush called shibboleth matrimonial and municipal is more than a mortal thing

On Tuesday for instance the rumor came to our office that a man fell off the new school building in Brooklyn and broke an arm and leg It was so near the time of going to press that we could not go to the reported scene of the accident for that day s paper But we rushed around among a dozen doctors shops and down to the new Court House—at the latter place expecting to find some of the school house contractors and get enough of the facts for one day But it was a complete failure Of course the other papers would have it in the morning, and we went up in disgust

Wednesday morning s papers hadn t a word about it—or anything else This was sort of soothing and we began to think that we could take our time now We would catch the contractors and surely get the desired information We leisurely tackled one of the men having the brickwork part of the job, who, at our request the day previous learned that a man had really fallen off the building and hurt himself But this infernal contractor not understanding the requirements of the business of itemizing had forgotten to get the name of the unfortunate man By this time it was too late again to go to Brooklyn, and so we hastily interviewed two dozen other doctors and then sat down on a corner for three minutes and a half and whispered to ourself in a way that there was not the slightest mistake about

Thinking that the other papers might never chop on any portion of that item we concluded to make a tour of Brooklyn after yesterday s paper went to press In the meantime the item was growing in importance The unfortunate man had been seen coming down in a wagon, hospital like, and he was somewhere on Telegraph avenue Our chief hope in a way in the continued stupidity of the other paper They had seldom gone blind on themselves in that respect and we were moderately happy

About four o clock yesterday afternoon, a lone footman might have been seen prowling around the new school building That was us Just as we turned one of those sharp corners of this specimen of modern architecture a piece of the roof—perhaps a few feet of rafter—enough to knock a grown person into the middle of next week came sailing down so near our defected head that we remained half scared to death for half an hour Then we proceeded to interview every carpenter on the ground floor not one of whom could tell the name of the man who had got hurt One man referred to another who up among the joists of the unfinished ceiling who might know the particulars By climbing up a window frame and holding on to a rough post that left some splinters in our hands we got the name Flying from the two dozen hammers made conversation under the circumstances anything but satisfactory This man crawled along on a board and bent down at the same time brushing off a handful of dust into our eyes and in accents will he repeated the information that on Tuesday last about noontime on George Tyson had fallen off the building and hurt himself but had not broken an arm or leg—not even busted Off the more he had been tossed Mr Lewis the night before at his residence on Second avenue and that he was doing well not having had any doctors assistance Mr Lewis had twisted an ankle and his back to a degree more than was pleasant perhaps—no more He had fallen about twenty feet from a flimsy constructed trestle work—hence these facts

Hereafter, parties inclined to fall that way will confer a favor by breaking themselves in two There are eighty-odd doctors in this village and only one Coroner Any one mentioning the above item in our hearing, must govern themselves accordingly

RELIGIOUS ITEMS.

New Confirmations — Berkeley — The Baptists, &c

The religious weekly for the Congregationalists—the Pacific contains the following items pertaining more or less to Oakland

The General Association of California will meet in Oakland October 7 1874

Eighteen young ones were received into Congregational fellowship in this city and vicinity last Sunday one of them to the Third Church five to the Bethany, one to the church at Clovendale and fourteen to the church in Oakland Three were received by the Mariners church

An ecclesiastical society has been formed to co operate with the Congregational church soon to be formed at Berkeley Rev W L Jones preached there last Sunday The congregations fill the hall in which they gather and the outlook is in all respects very encouraging

The Pacific has a cheery letter from Rev B S McLafferty, of Oakland, from which we extract the following, "Our beautiful house of worship is not to be taken from us Upon the last day of grace given by our creditors, we raised and paid the sum of $8 500 Thus at one stroke is blotted out nearly one-half of the sum of our liabilities as a church. In addition to this we have secured a reduction of two per cent upon the annual rate of interest paid Our burdens now do not exceed our ability to bear them Our brethern taking up their residence in Oakland need not fear to cast their lot with us We are realizing more and more daily how good and how pleasant it is for brethern to dwell together in unity

Child Astray.

At noon to day as we were en route to get the Police Court conclusions an old man entered the City Hall grounds, with a cart load of stove pipe under one arm and on the other he carried a little girl whom he found wandering about the streets He said first that he would not leave the pipe out on the sidewalk — I new Oakland too well — so he laid it down near the city building and proceeded to leave the little girl with officer Carlton on duty in the police office There was doubt about her pronunciation—whether her name was Brown or Ball - until towards the last of the interview We left Carlton playing the part of a doting parent to perfection considering his youth and unmarried condition The variety of a police officers life enables him to adapt himself to most any circumstance but who has lost a little girl?

The Show To-Night.

The grand entertainment of the season will take place at the Academy of Music to night The programme offers an excellent array and from the standing of the members of the Troupe and the talent of which they are possessed we think the house will be crowded Beside the immense bill there are to be twelve selected dances with Louis Pindecker s Band all for twenty five cents admission The Troupe hope to realize at least $100 for Mrs Ambrose—both in sympathy with the public

THE LIFE-BOAT

The lifeboat! the lifeboat! when tempests are dark
She's the beacon of hope to the foundering bark
When, amid the wild roar of the hurricane's sweep
The minute gun booms like a knell on the deep

The lifeboat! the lifeboat! the whirlwind and rain
The white crested breakers oppose her in vain
Her crew is resolute and her timbers are seamed
She's the vessel of mercy—God speed to her launch

The lifeboat! the lifeboat! how fearless and free
She wins her bold course o'er the wide rolling sea
She bounds o'er the surges with gallant disdain
She has stemmed them before and she'll stem them again

The lifeboat! the lifeboat! she's manned by the brave,
In the noblest of cause commissioned to save
What heart but has thrilled in the cause of distress,
At the lifeboat's endeavors, the lifeboat's success!

The lifeboat! the lifeboat! no vessel that sails
Has stemmed such rough billows and weathered such gales
Now on Nelson's proud ship when his death strife was won
Such true glory achieved as the life boat has done

THE RING.

"Give me," said Lubin to his fair
To whom he would bow more than friend
"Give me the little ring you wear
"Tis like my love—it has no end

"Excuse me that I cannot do
My heart you have no hope of winning
The ring is like my love for you—
For, Lubin, it has no beginning

—The most distinguishing feature of the opera is rendered in Portugal as the extraordinary orchestral music. The orchestra is composed of more than seventy professors. The fourth flute is the first at one of the finest theaters. In short the director has picked out the best performers from every theater in Italy and has taught them himself for a long time. The effect is wonderful

— Dear George how sweet and wavy that white rose!" exclaimed a fair young lady, looking languidly from a window. "I love how beautiful!" says dear George, more intent on insinuating his arm around a twenty four bone corset. "How like a dream!—how like a dream!" "How like a what!" retorted a disgusted Grimgo, "them's oats, young man"

—A showman whose notices called for a few fat boys to feed his cannibals received a card from a man saying that he couldn't spare his boys, but he had a good stall fed mother in law that he thought would suit

—Eight Connecticut young ladies have just taken the veil. They were hopelessly freckled
